Privacy Policy and Earning Disclaimer:

The protection of users' privacy online is of paramount importance to us, particularly when engaging in business activities on our website. This Privacy Policy ("Policy") outlines our data collection and processing practices for both casual visitors ("Visitors") and those who choose to register and access the available services through our website's sales funnels ("Authorized Customers" collectively referred to as "Users").

"Personally Identifiable Information" ("PII") encompasses any data that can be used to directly or indirectly identify, contact, or locate an individual. This includes, but is not limited to, names, addresses, phone numbers, email addresses, financial profiles, social security numbers, and credit card information. Excluded from PII are anonymously collected data (i.e., without individual user identification) and demographic information not directly linked to a specific individual.

Which personally identifiable information (PII) is collected?

1. Data Collected:

Visitors: We collect basic user profile information from all site visitors. This may include, but is not limited to, browsing history, device information, and approximate location data.

Authorized Customers: Additionally, we collect personal information from authorized customers who register and utilize our services. This includes, but is not limited to:

Contact Information: Names, addresses, phone numbers, and email addresses.

Business Information: Nature and size of the business, including industry and market demographics.

Advertising Inventory: Details of advertising inventory intended for purchase or sale, including format, targeting parameters, and pricing.

2. Third-Party Data Collection:

In addition to our direct data collection, certain third-party service vendors may also collect information from visitors and authorized customers. These vendors include, but are not limited to, credit card companies, clearinghouses, and banks involved in facilitating financial transactions such as credit card processing or escrow services. We do not control these third parties' data practices, but we require them to disclose their privacy policies and how they handle personal information obtained from our users. Please note that some third parties may act solely as intermediaries, transmitting information without storing or using it themselves.

How does the site or our website use personally identifiable information?

1. Use of Personally Identifiable Information:

Personalization: We leverage PII to personalize user experiences by tailoring service offerings and content relevance on the website.

Fulfillment of Transactions: PII is essential for facilitating buying and selling requests within the website's marketplace.

Communication: We utilize PII to send targeted communications to visitors and authorized customers regarding relevant research opportunities, purchase/selling offers, and subject matter updates.

Response and Information Sharing: We may respond to specific inquiries or provide requested information using PII to personalize and enhance assistance.

2. Information Sharing:

Authorized Customer Matching: With user consent, we may share PII about authorized customers with other authorized customers seeking to evaluate potential transactions within the marketplace.

Aggregated Data Sharing: We may share non-personally identifiable, aggregated data about our user base (including demographics) with affiliated agencies and third-party vendors for market research purposes.

Opt-Out Options: We provide clear and accessible opt-out mechanisms for users who wish to limit communications or information sharing with us or our authorized agents.

How is personally identifiable information stored?

The personal information we collect is securely stored and protected using industry-standard measures. Authorized access is restricted solely to fulfill the purposes outlined above, and no third-party entities or employees have access beyond this. In terms of user control, visitors and authorized customers may opt out of receiving unsolicited communications or being contacted by us, our vendors, or affiliated agencies at any time. This can be accomplished by following the instructions included in any email, message, or correspondence.

We utilize cookies for various purposes on our website. These include gathering insights into visitor preferences and service usage, as well as enhancing security for authorized customers. For instance, if an authorized customer remains inactive for ten minutes after logging in, we will automatically log them out to maintain account security.

How does the site or our website keep personally identifiable information secure?

Employee Awareness: All employees undergo thorough training on our comprehensive security policies and procedures. Access to personally identifiable information is strictly limited to a select group of authorized personnel, each requiring secure password authentication.

Security Measures: We maintain robust security systems and processes that are subject to regular audits and updates. Sensitive data, such as financial information and Social Security numbers, receives additional protection through robust encryption protocols, both during transmission and storage.

Limitations of Data Security: While we prioritize maintaining a secure environment, it's essential to acknowledge inherent limitations in electronic communication and data storage. Despite implementing commercially reasonable security measures, no system can guarantee absolute immunity from errors, malicious attacks, or unauthorized access. Therefore, we cannot offer absolute guarantees against such occurrences and disclaim any liability for associated damages.

How can visitors correct any inaccuracies in personally identifiable information?

Updating and Accessing Information: Visitors and authorized customers may access and update their personally identifiable information (PII) at any time by contacting us through the dedicated form available on the "About Us" page. This form can also be used to request deletion or deactivation of PII.

Deletion Mechanism: We provide a user-friendly mechanism for deleting or deactivating PII directly from our database via email. While commercially reasonable efforts will be made to complete such requests, please be aware that due to data backups and legal record-keeping requirements, complete deletion may not always be possible. However, any requested deactivation will functionally remove the information from active use, ensuring it is not sold, transferred, or used in any way moving forward.
